

2012 Spanish Linguistics in North Carolina Conference Program January 21, 2012

8-8:25am Registration

8:25 Welcome and opening remarks

8:30-10:00 Session 1: Lexicon, Pragmatics, Code-Switching. Chair: Tim Gupton, UGA

8:30-9:00 Nouns behaving vaguely: cosa and cuestión as hedges in Spanish. Chad Howe: University of Georgia

9:00-9:30 On the pragmatics of 'vivir' + V[Gerund]. Patricia Amaral: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

9:30-10:00 “Idesubicada niko! Miramina lo que me dice!” Guaraní-Spanish Jopara code-switching in the novel “Ramona Quebranto”. Bruno Estigarribia: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

10:00-10:15 Break

10:15-11:45 Session 2: SLA and HLE. Chair: Jim Michnowicz, NCSU

10:15-10:45 The arduous adventure to Advanced. Mark Darhower: North Carolina State University

10:45-11:15 A quantitative and qualitative comparison of online and face-to-face language classes. Mariche García Bayonas: University of North Carolina Greensboro

11:15-11:45 The language of space and potential impact of cultural scripts. Alyson Eggleston: East Carolina University

11:45-1:15pm Lunch (provided) / Poster Session

1:15-1:30pm Business meeting for SLINKI 2013

1:45-3:45pm Session 3: Morphology and Syntax. Chair: Mark Darhower, NCSU

- 1:30-2:00 Experience(r)s and phase theory: Evidence for the phasehood of experience(r) v from Western Romance. Ricard Vinas-de-Puig: East Carolina University
- 2:00-2:30 Imperfect and imperfect progressive use by Colombians in North Carolina and Bogotá. Scott Lamanna: Calvin College
- 2:30-3:00 Bilingual Chipilo Spanish: An overview of the morphosyntactic outcomes of language contact. Hilary Barnes: Fayetteville State University
- 3:00-3:30 The syntax-prosody interface and contrast: Galician as a case study. Timothy Gupton: University of Georgia
- 3:30-3:45 Break

3:45-5:15 Session 4: Phonetics and Phonology. Chair: John Stevens, UNC Wilmington

- 3:45-4:15 Tying perception data and production frequencies together: The relationship between Puerto Rican Spanish in North Carolina and Panama City Spanish. Jennifer Griffin: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
- 4:15-4:45 Aspirated /ptk/ in Yucatan Spanish: the intersection of linguistic and social factors (and what different statistical models tell us about them). Jim Michnowicz and Lindsey Carpenter: North Carolina State University
- 4:45-5:15 An acoustic analysis of variable vowel production in heritage and bilingual Spanish of North Carolina. Amanda Boomershine: University of North Carolina Wilmington
- 5:15 Closing Remarks

2012 Spanish Linguistics in North Carolina Poster Session January 21, 2012

Hilary Barnes , Fayetteville State University and Jim Michnowicz , NCSU	Peak alignment in two contact varieties of Mexican Spanish
Ana Capanegra University of Alabama	The effects authentic texts have on the written production of novice foreign language students
Arika Dean NCSU	Exploring Evidence of Subjunctive 'Simplification' (or Leveling) in Spanish
Inmaculada Garnes University of Georgia	Venga: de marcador discursivo a adverbio intensificador en español peninsular
David Graber UNC Wilmington	Making students aware of Romance language connections
Lamar Graham University of Georgia	Comparing hesitation markers in Sanjuanero Spanish
Rebecca Gorham , NCSU	Pronouns of Address in Costa Rica
Mar Gutiérrez , NCSU	El declive de la acentuación ortográfica
Sarah Lowman University of Georgia	An analysis of the Spanish discourse marker por un lado... por otro: A case of grammaticalization
Christine Weissglass Florida State University	An acoustic study of rhotics in Spanish onset clusters produced by L2 learners