

Growth Opportunity # 3

10 points

Guidelines

- Attend screening of Warriors... In Their Own Words on November 23rd. See below for details.
- Provide a one page double spaced document with the following items
 - Brief effective summary of movie
 - Discussion of how it relates to class discussions
 - Be specific – refer to specific items from textbook
 - Incorporate a concept/theory from class
 - Clearly relate what you learned in video to the concept/theory; create an example I might use in class
- Due no later than beginning of class on November 25th ; hard copy only. No excuse accepted
 - Will not accept late for any reason
 - If your printer is broken find somewhere to print before class
 - Will not accept via email

Sunday November 23, 2008

WARRIORS ... IN THEIR OWN WORDS (Not Rated)

We have always had warriors, from as far back in history as one can go. Warriors are timeless. And like the iconic soldiers who preceded them, the modern day warrior is just as fearless, strong and noble.

Through first person accounts, the film “WARRIORS ... IN THEIR OWN WORDS” takes an in-depth look into the spirit of these soldiers; their words are unfiltered, honest, and hard-hitting. Covering all branches of military service from WWII through the current war fronts in Iraq and Afghanistan, we meet up close and personal – and in their own words – some of the unique warriors who defend our country’s freedom. We learn their thoughts, we see their strengths and courage –inherent traits that noticeably make them stand out from the rest.

Sponsored by UNCW’s Student Veterans Organization (SVO).

Shown with permission from the LOOC Foundation in association with Pratt Entertainment Group.

2008 COPYRIGHT THE LOOC FOUNDATION ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. 84 MIN.

Lumina Theatre. 7 p.m. FREE and OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

To view the movie trailer, visit the website www.warriorsthefilm.com

If you tear-up/cry/bawl in sad movies you may want to watch the trailer to determine how many tissues you need to bring with you!!
I would arrive early as the sponsors believe it will be a full-house.