STUDENT ANECDOTE

“As a budding teacher, this chance to experience school systems and students that are out of my realm of familiarity would show how other countries and cultures conduct themselves in academic environments; this type of opportunity doesn’t come along often. The traditional internship gives me an opportunity to work with a local fellow teacher but the trip to Belize will take this one step further and give me the chance to interact with attending peers as well as teachers from Belize. I have the philosophy that people should travel and with the growing population of students that come from Central America and Hispanic backgrounds, everyone should be culturally aware. Travelling to Belize will forge new friendships and provides the opportunity for globally connected classrooms.”

COURSE DESCRIPTION

From the UNCW Catalogue: EDN 592 - International Field Experience in Education. Consent of instructor. Will provide experiences in a selected educational setting as part of a study abroad program.

OVERVIEW

This International Field Experience (EDN 592) will provide 5 weeks of daily experiences in selected primary or secondary schools in San Pedro, Belize. Students will observe Belizean teachers in schools, provide instructional support, keep electronic journals of their experience, record and analyze similarities and differences of the Belizean educational system studied with their traditional internship experience, and develop curricula and support materials based upon this international experience. Students will also engage in a service project in Belize that is student focused and serves the needs of the school-based community. This international field experience will focus on the following: current field experience experiences in global education; the development, implementation, and assessment of curricular materials; and the evaluation and integration of relevant pedagogy and technology in the international classroom.

“In the age of globalization, an intimate understanding of a foreign culture is both a valuable academic asset and an enriching personal experience. As a leader in education, the Watson School of Education is dedicated to providing education students with the opportunity to work and study in schools throughout the world.” (From <http://www.uncw.edu/ed/international/>)

“At UNCW, passionate and engaged teaching, learning and research matter. Students consistently praise the quality of their interactions with faculty and express satisfaction with their overall educational experience. The faculty culture emphasizes teaching and mentoring, incorporating research as an important component of the undergraduate learning experience and a service to the state. International experiences are encouraged through study abroad programs and language and culture studies on campus.” (<http://www.uncw.edu/facts/>)

PURPOSE

The purpose of this course is to provide teacher candidates with: 1) active participation in a five week field experience in a Belize using an indigenous curriculum; 2) the opportunity to teach lessons during an international field experience, thereby giving students an opportunity to collaborate with Belizean teachers and provide instruction to Belizean children, merging US teaching methodologies with Belizean strategies; 3) and negotiating understanding of each participant’s conceptual framework with an international educational framework.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. Students will record and reflect on daily observational experiences in a selected school in an international setting.
2. Students will compare and contrast a Belizean school setting with their American internship setting using electronic journaling through reflective practice.
3. Present and defend a philosophy for teaching children at your assigned grade level.
4. Students will demonstrate acquired knowledge, skills, and dispositions while applying a variety of instructional strategies to a novel setting.
5. Students will provide observable evidence of mastery of the North Carolina Professional Teaching Standards.
6. Students will create a video documentary highlighting an educational, societal and/or cultural factor in Belize.
7. Students will engage in a service-orientated project and demonstrate evidence of having completed the effort.

8. Students will prepare a thoughtful and reflective analysis comparing and contrasting the teaching experience.
