

Latin 101

Jan. 20, 2010

Nouns (Again)

Terms:

- declension: spelling group for nouns and adjectives.
- case: the form a noun takes to show its use in a sentence. In Latin, the use of a word in a sentence is shown by its ending.
- stem: the central part of a noun or adjective that shows its meaning.
- ending: the end of the noun or adjective, that changes according to the rules of its spelling group (declension) in order to show its use in the sentence.

Cases (categories of uses of words in sentences):

- nominative: the case used to show subjects and words describing subjects
- genitive: the case used to show possession
- dative: the case used to show indirect objects, usually with a “to” or “for” meaning
- accusative: the case used to show direct objects and objects of some prepositions
- ablative: the case used to show the object of some prepositions.
