Below are two dating scenarios. Please read each one carefully and answer the following question.

SCENARIO #1

Thursday evening you meet a man at a mutual friend's house and spend the whole night engaged in lively and interesting conversation. Before the two of you part for the evening, he asks you for your telephone number and you give it to him. The next day he calls you to tell you that he had a great time talking to you the night before and asks you out for dinner. You agree to go out with him the following evening (Saturday night). The date is wonderful. He greets you at your door appropriately dressed and compliments you on your attire. He takes you to a very nice restaurant where you enjoy good food and more entertaining conversation. At the end of the evening, he walks you to your door and says, "I had a really good time tonight. Can I call you again tomorrow?" You say, "yes" and, happily, he leaves.

How likely is it that you would go out on a second date with the man from Scenario #1?

SCENARIO #2

Thursday evening you meet a very attractive man at a mutual friend's house and spend the whole night engaged in lively and interesting conversation. Before the two of you part for the evening, he asks you for your telephone number and you give it to him. The next day he calls you to tell you that he had a great time talking to you the night before and asks you out for dinner. You agree to go out with him the following evening (Saturday night). The date is wonderful. He greets you at your door looking better than he did when you met him and presents you with a single red rose. He takes you to a very nice restaurant where you enjoy good food and more entertaining conversation. At the end of the evening, he walks you to your door and kisses you passionately. You return his kiss. Afterward, he looks deeply into your eyes and says, "I had a great time tonight. I'll call you tomorrow." He waits for you to say, "okay," then he leaves.

How likely is it that you would go out on a second date with the man from Scenario #2?

NOT AT ALL LIKELY    1   2   3   4   5   6   7   8   9   10    VERY LIKELY
